The Leverhulme-funded International Network
Misson Statement

Luxury is no longer seen as the pastime of a small wealthy elite. Today’s luxury industry is one of Europe’s most dynamic sectors; consumers are allured by luxury brands and services; and nation states heavily tax luxuries. Yet, luxury is not just a product and outcome of the twentieth century. There is a long, complex and well documented role for luxury within history. The business, marketing and creative sectors are also keen to consider ‘luxury’ within its historical framing, allowing for a better understanding of the genesis, evolution and transformation of this material and psychological phenomenon.

The Leverhulme International Network “Luxury & the Manipulation of Desire” aims to connect the long history of luxury with the importance that luxury has assumed in contemporary society. It does so by fostering dialogue between academics and curators based in partner institutions as well as experts, journalists and business people working in the luxury sector internationally.

The Network is hosted by the Global History and Culture Centre at the University of Warwick and led by Giorgio Riello and Rosa Salzberg in collaboration with the Victoria and Albert Museum, the University of Bologna, the University of Stockholm, the University of Melbourne and the Museum of Art and Design, New York.
