Revise and Resubmit:
Using the Journal Review Process to Improve Your Paper

A professional development seminar led by Professor David Stark
Sponsored by the Centre for Interdisciplinary Methodologies

Thursday 19 January, 16:00-17:30, OC1.09, the Oculus building

How can one use the journal review process to improve a manuscript for publication? What are good strategies for responding to reviewers and editors? How to choose the right journal for the paper? And what about working with co-authors? These and other questions will be addressed in this professional development seminar, led by David Stark (Warwick and Columbia University). Participants in the seminar will have access to the complete correspondence between Stark and the editors and reviewers (across two rounds of revise and resubmit) for a manuscript that became a prize-winning article published in the American Journal of Sociology. The seminar is targeted to younger faculty and is also open to PhD students.

David Stark is Professor of Social Science at Warwick’s Centre for Interdisciplinary Methodologies and also Professor of Sociology at Columbia where he directs the Center on Organizational Innovation. Stark has many publications in both Europe and the United States including articles in the American Sociological Review (1986, 1988) and the American Journal of Sociology (1996, 2001, 2006, 2010, 2015). His work has been cited more than 11,000 times. The recipient of numerous awards including a Guggenheim Fellowship, he has had continuous funding from the U.S. National Science Foundation since 2000. His current research is supported by a major five-year Advanced Career Award from the European Research Council. His CV, papers, and presentations are available at
