This bibliography focuses on enactive, embodied and kinaesthetic learning in business studies. This bibliography should be used in conjunction with the bibliography of Open-space Learning by Barry Sheils, by those interested in the application of performance practices to business training and education.

Baron, L. and L. Morin. ‘The Impact of Executive Coaching on Self-efficacy Related to

Cooper, J., Johna Basson, and Pieter Schaap. ‘A Training Programme Based on the Principles of Social Constructivism and Focused on Developing People for the Future World of Work:'

Eskerod, P. ‘Action Learning for Further Developing Project Management
Competencies: A Case Study from an Engineering Consultancy Company’.

Faria, A.J. ‘A Survey of the Use of Business Games in Academia and Business’.

Gentry, James W. and A.C. Burns. ‘Experiential Learning’s Role in Motivating Students: a Model Based on Curiosity’. Developments in Business Simulation and Experiential

Golden-Biddle, K. ‘Organizational dramas and dramatic staging’s about them’. Journal of Gosen, J, and J. Washbush. ‘A review of Scholarship on Assessing Experiential

Learning Effectiveness’ Simulation & Gaming. 35.2 (2004): 270-293

Gosling, J. and H. Mintzberg. ‘Management Education as if Both Matter’. Management

Heinich, R., M. Molenda and J.D. Russell. Instructional Media and the New Technologies for

Hertel, J.P. and B.J. Millis. Using Simulations to Promote Learning in Higher Education.

Hoberman, Solomon and Sidney Mailick. Experiential Management Development.

London:

Hollingshead, A. B. ‘Group and Individual Training: The Impact of Practice on Performance’.

Hornyak, Martin, J. and Diana Page. ‘Experiential Learning: Introducing faculty and staff to a University leadership development program’ 35.4 (2004): 461-475

Wolfe, J. ‘The Effectiveness of Business Games in Strategic Management Course Work’.

Zielinski, D. ‘Soft Skills, Hard Truths: How the Project Management Discipline is Rediscovering the Power and Importance of Old-fashioned People Skills’. Training, 42.7 (2005): 8-22.