John Harrington and Ambreena Manji (Law School, Cardiff University)

Mobility and Modernity: Biographical Studies in African and British Legal Education

The aim of this Round Table Discussion is to consider how the history of legal education in post- and neo-colonial contexts can be researched and written. It takes as its focus the germinal connection between the Law Schools at Dar es Salaam. Impetus for the Round Table comes from a research project which we are developing and which will study the development of this connection over a number of decades, focussing on the biographies of key academics involved, but also paying close attention to significant political, education and legal contexts. The Discussion builds on a one-day workshop on the project organized with the Institute for Advanced Legal Studies London, 2\textsuperscript{nd} December 2015.